

Clara A. Hahn was born August 20, 1913 in Falls City, Nebraska, daughter of Herman Hahn, born September 20, 1875, in Falls City, and Anna D. (Wulf) Hahn born August 10, 1882 in Falls City, Herman Hahn son of Henry Hahn born March 4, 1848 in Hanover, Germany and Doris (also called Dorthie) Elizabeth (Deuman) Hahn born October 13, 1852 in Hanover, Germany. Anna D. (Wulf) Hahn daughter of Heinrich Johannes Wulf born April 27, 1844 in Wesenstedt Province, Hanover, Germany and Dorothea (Hahn) Wulf born January 3, 1847 in Ebsdorf, Hanover, Germany. Heinrich J. Wulf and Dorothea (Hahn) Wulf came to the United States from Germany shortly after their marriage. They settled in Iowa where their first child a son Herman was born July 13, 1868. Henrich and his family moved to the Falls City, Nebraska area in the early 1870's where Anna D. was born August 10, 1882. Henry Hahn came to the United States from Germany in the late 1860's or early 1870's and settled in the Falls City, Nebraska area. Doris (Dorthie) E. Deuman came to the United States from Germany in 1872 and settled in Falls City, Nebraska.

Henry Hahn and Doris (Dorthie) Deuman were married in Falls City, Nebraska. They were the parents of four girls and two boys, Anna born May 10, 1873, Herman F. September 20, 1875, Emma April 25, 1878, Lena July 17, 1880, Elizabeth February 23, 1884, Henry A. September 22, 1891. The story was told that Herman drove his mother Doris (Dorthie) Hahn in their horse and buggy to see Dorothea Wulf and her new daughter Anna when she was born. Herman F. Hahn and Anna D. Wulf were united in marriage March 31, 1901. Herman and Anna moved onto a small farm in the Falls City area. While living on this farm they became the parents of two sons and three daughters, George H. born August 18, 1902, Amelia A. October 27, 1904, Dorothy E. November 22, 1906, Edward H. May 18, 1909 and Clara A. August 20, 1913. About this time Herman began to have a serious problem getting his breath. The doctors informed him that he had developed a serious asthmatic condition and advised him to move to a dryer climate. Herman and his family moved to eastern Colorado in March 1916, and settled on a small farm a few miles east of Grover, Colorado where they made their home for a little over two years.

Several families of German ancestry had been holding church services in the homes of some of the local residents. the group organized a congregation to be known as the Zion Evangelical Lutheran Church of Grover, Colorado. Herman was one of the charter members of this congregation. The new congregation agreed to construct a building in which to hold their services. Herman Hahn served on the building committee. The church building was constructed on the table land on property donated by one of the members. The lumber for the building was hauled from Grover to the site by teams and wagons. The new church was dedicated in October 1917. This building served the congregation until April 1951 when a new church building was dedicated. The old building was sold to a local resident and was moved off the property, it was later donated to the Centennial Village in Island Grove Park in Greeley, Colorado. The building was restored and is presently being used as a non- denominational chapel for weddings and other special services.

Herman Hahn found a farm upon the tableland about nine miles east of Grover that he thought would be more suitable for his farming operations. The family moved to their new home December 31, 1918. While living on this farm their youngest son Henry F. was born February 5, 1922. While living on this farm, Herman and Anna's children attended school at the church which was taught by the Pastor. They had classes from grade one through eight.

All of Herman and Anna's children, except the two boys Edward and Henry, had left home by the early 1930's to find their fortunes else where. Edward and Henry were still at home helping with the operation of the farm. Edward married Louise M. Harms December 25, 1940 in Kimball, Nebraska. Louise was born November 11, 1912 in Ireland, Idaho. After Edward's marriage Herman decided to retire and turned the operation of the farm to Edward. He and Anna moved into a small house on George's land, where they lived for about six years and they then moved into Greeley. Herman and Anna made their home in Greeley, where Herman died January 31, 1964. Anna continued living in Greeley where she died December 15, 1966. They were both buried in Sunset Memorial Gardens, Greeley, Colorado.

George met and married Josephine Lower (Lawrence) May 29, 1934. Josephine was born November 29, 1906 in Columbia City, Indiana. She had a son Lee from a previous marriage. George and his family continued living on his farm and running sheep. The New Years day blizzard in 1949 killed several hundred head of his sheep. That summer George sold the remaining sheep that survived the blizzard. He also sold his land and moved to Brownsville, Oregon where he purchased and moved onto a small farm.

They were both buried in Lakeview cemetery Cheyenne, Wyoming.

Edward continued operating the farm, where he and Louise became the parents of two sons, Edward LeRoy born February 13, 1942 in Kimball, Nebraska and Eugene D. born May 5, 1944 also in Kimball, Nebraska and one daughter Evelyn L. born April 16, 1947 in Greeley, Colorado. Clara left the farm and moved to Cheyenne, Wyoming during the summer of 1931. She obtained employment as a house keeper in private homes in Cheyenne. In the late spring of 1933, the family where Clara was employed, purchased a new electric iron from a local music store. The iron was apparently defective as it would blow a fuse every time it was turned on. The serviceman was called to repair the iron. Ellwood answered the call and repaired the iron while Clara waited impatiently so she could finish the ironing. This casual meeting blossomed into a relationship that resulted in marriage in Kimball, Nebraska September 10, 1933. A son Donald Everett was born May 31, 1934 in Cheyenne. The first of June 1934 Ellwood obtained employment with the Wyoming Highway Department in the field Engineering Department. A daughter Janet Lucille was born January 11, 1936 in Cheyenne. This employment continued untill the fall of 1943 when he returned to the Highway Department and was assigned to the Road Design division in the office. He spent the following two summers in the field, supervising various construction projects in the Lyman and Rock Springs areas. He then continued in the Road Design division. Ellwood passed the examination and obtained his license as a Professional Engineer with the State of Wyoming, in 1955, which qualified him for an administrative position with the Highway Department. He subsequently was placed in charge of the Road Design Division, which position he held for several years. He then held other administrative positions until he retired December 31, 1974 after over thirtynine years of service.

Clara transferred her membership to Trinity Lutheran Church in Cheyenne from her home congregation in Grover when she first came to Cheyenne in 1931 and had maintained her membership there. Ellwood joined the First Baptist Church in Cheyenne in the spring of 1927, which was the faith of his grandparents. Ellwood joined the Trinity Lutheran Church in Cheyenne in September 1951.
